

William "Billy" Jarrett Brown

November 24, 1958 - July 13, 2018

William J Brown was born on November 24, 1958 in Key West, Florida to Mary Lou Corso-Gardner and John William Brown. William (Bill) fought the battle with pancreatic cancer for 20 months with dignity, determination and a strong will. He never gave in or gave up his battle. Cancer did not win...as Bill passed on to our Heavenly Father's arms with his beloved family by his side on July 13, 2018.

Bill loved his family. He leaves behind the love of his life and beloved wife of 40 years Patricia (Trish) Brown. Bill and Trish were high school sweethearts and soulmates who fell in love and married in 1978. The love they had for each other is a symbol of true love and compassion which will carry through all eternity.

Bill is survived by 3 children his son Jarrett William Brown, who Bill was so very proud of the man he became. A compassionate, loving, caring son, who took care of his father during this journey and never left his father's side.

His daughter Jenika, who he loved so very much. She was his daddy's girl.

He was proud of Jenika and all she has accomplished and worked for. Bill was so excited when Jenika & (John) made him a Papa with his grandson and namesake William Colton and granddaughter Daisy Catherine.

His daughter Kara, who was his baby girl whom he adored dearly. He was so proud of Kara and all her accomplishments at the University of Arizona and Arizona State University. He was the proud father watching Kara receive her Bachelor's degree in Sports Journalism with Magna Cum Laude honors at Arizona State University in December 2017. His two grandchildren William and Daisy, whom he cherished and loved so deeply. His grandchildren completed him and William was his best friend.

Bill is also survived by his brothers Johnny (Linda), Jay (Lisa), Jim, and sisters Donnie (Marv), Ernea (Larry). Numerous aunts, uncles, cousins, nieces, nephews, great nieces, great nephews, a brotherhood of lifelong friends and his beloved pets, Gracie and Tigger.

Bill is preceded in death by his mother Mary Lou, stepfather Ernest Gardner and father John William Brown.

“ I've known Bill about 48 years and he's always been in a class by himself. I've always sensed and felt it, and others who've known him well (and to know Bill was to love him) will know what I'm talking about.

The last year and a half I've thought about Bill nearly every day and much of the time I was turning over in my mind what a really unique and special person he was, and trying to put my finger on what it was that made him the wonderful person he was day in and day out.

When God made Bill he was in rare form and bestowed upon him a long list of the finest qualities. Thankfully these qualities, creations gifts, weren't wasted on Bill who shared them with us every day, and passed them on to his beautiful children where I saw them as clearly as I ever had in Bill during the saddest moments of their young lives. The world was a much better place with him in it.

Outside of my immediate family, I've never felt more comfortable, or enjoyed being with anyone more than Bill. I miss my friend and will never have another like him. There will never be anyone like him.

It is said that grief is the price we pay for love, and it's true but that's our burden. Bill is at peace and his reward for being as god created him, a wonderful person.

“ When we were younger we would all go to Grandpas for holidays, but Christmas Eve was always the best. I remember that Uncle Bill was the only one that I could talk to, and when my Dad passed away my Uncle Bill and my Aunt Ticha and my cousins were right there for me. I Love you Uncle Bill, Go Be With God.

“ Oh Daddy, where do I begin. Ever since I was a little girl you have had my whole heart. You taught me how to love unconditionally, learn from life lessons and most of all put family first. I have so many questions still... who am I going to turn to now? This is just not fair, but I tell myself you are in a better place and your suffering has ended.

I will cherish all of our memories, from lava on the floor, you acting like the "V", our family vacations to Disneyland & Hotel Del, your love for my "Stevie" boy and trying to do everything in your power to save him, the birth of my children and the way you looked at them while you held them close to you, watching you play on the floor with William and Daisy talking in your Donald Duck voice and list goes on. I promise you I will tell "your best friend" William and Daisy stories of you and share pictures so they remember how much you loved them.

I don't know if I can ever be the same person I was before you passed. If I were to learn one thing from this awful nightmare, it would be from the night before you passed. All your friends and family rushed to be your side and the one thing that was constantly said was "Your dad is a wonderful, genuine, kind-hearted man and you never had anything negative to say about anyone. There was nothing your dad wouldn't do for his family and friends. All he knew was love". I told myself that night, that I promise to be more like you and be a better person.

I want you to know I will always hold on to the way you smell, your voice of when you told me "I love you baby girl" and your touch of when you squeezed my hand last.

Oh Daddy, I will love you always and miss you forever.

Jenika Brown - July 20, 2018 at 04:42 PM

“ My love is at peace. The love of my life, I am so heartbroken and crushed to the core of my being. I will always love you, and I know you will always be by my side. The love we shared carries through all eternity. You told me that life is just a blip of time, and you will meet me with open arms and we will spend eternity together. So for now be my angel and watch over your children, grandchildren and me. Love you Bill, and yes I can hear you whisper softly "love you Trish"

Trish - July 20, 2018 at 12:40 PM

“ You already know where he is and how things will be...as he is and will always be with you. I offer you my deepest sympathy for your beautiful heart...and my prayers for your comfort. Love, light and infinite blessings to you and yours
